Jewels of the ocean

The sea is home to many unique animals and minerals that offer health and beauty benefits. Different ocean species have different effects on the skin and body; some detoxify, while others target pigment-producing cells (melanocytes) and even skin tone. Plankton, crushed pearls and sea water are often used in beauty products, but algae or seaweed, are most common. They're fantastic waste-binding agents, with easy-to-absorb proteins, vitamins and minerals that nourish the skin and help keep it hydrated. Whether you're looking for great skincare or increased wellness, its worth diving into these beauty aids from the sea.

TRIED & TESTED
NAIL POLISH REMOVERS

WIPES Fabulous Nail Polish Remover Wipes, $7.95 (36 wipes), are travel-friendly cloth discs. One pad is enough for five fingers, which is more than most competitors can handle. LIQUID To maximise your remover mileage, go for the traditional liquid and cotton ball combination. Australis See Ya Later Nail Polish Remover, $4.95 (120ml), comes in a generous bottle and is well priced. SPONGE It's been around for a while, but Sally Hansen Kwik Off Salon Formula Nail Color Remover, $9.50, still amazes us. The brilliance? You can wipe off polish without disturbing the varnish on your other fingers. Perfect for fixing nicks.

WHAT I'M LOVING RIGHT NOW...
Kate Ritchie, Vaseline ambassador

"I used to scrimp on brushes, but always ended up with what looked like a beard, due to maiting. These are beautiful to the touch and great for easy application." Le Provis Cellular Skinwhisk Complex, $39 (150ml). "I can't stop myself from touching spots on my face. With this product, they're gone in no time."

Shiseido's artistic director, Dick Page, drew inspiration from the sea for his new colour collection. Check out Perfect Rouge Lipstick in Red Triton, $45, and Smoothing Eyeliner Pencil in Black Sand, $38.
